

Contributors

Douglas C. Baynton holds a Ph.D. in history from the University of Iowa. He is currently Visiting Assistant Professor in the Department of History and the American Sign Language program at the University of Iowa. His book, Forbidden Signs: American Culture and the Campaign against Sign Language, from which this article is excerpted, is forthcoming from the University of Chicago Press in the fall of 1996. His previously published works include 'A Silent Exile on this Earth: The Metaphorical Construction of Deafness in the Nineteenth Century'. American Quarterly 44 (June, 1992).

David Best is a Reader in the Department of Philosophy, University of Wales, Swansea; Visiting Professor, School of Theatre, Manchester Metropolitan University; Senior Academic Fellow and Honorary Professor, DeMontfort University; Visiting Professor, International Centre for the Study of Drama in Education, and Consultant to Bretton Hall College of the Arts. He holds various honorary appointments. Recently, he was Professor of Philosophy at Birmingham Institute of Art and Design. He acted as consultant for the National Department of Education and Science for England and Wales. He has written numerous articles and his books include: Expression and Movement in the Arts (Lepus Books, H. Kimpton Publishers, 1974); Philosophy and Human Movement (cited above); Feeling and Reason in the Arts (Allen & Unwin, London, 1985) and The Rationality of Feeling (Falmer Press, London, 1993). He frequently speaks at conferences and lectures in several countries. His philosophical interests are wide, but he is best known for his work in philosophy of the arts and the arts in education.

Brenda Farnell holds a Ph.D. in anthropology from Indiana University (Bloomington). She is currently a visiting assistant professor in the anthropology department at the University of Iowa. She is the author of Do You See What I Mean: Plains Indian Sign Talk and the Embodiment of Action, and a multi-media interactive CD ROM, Wiyuta: Assiniboine Storytelling with Signs (both published by University of Texas Press, 1995). She has also edited a series of essays entitled, Human Action Signs in Cultural Context: The Visible and the Invisible in Movement and Dance (Scarecrow Press, 1995). Recent papers include 'Ethno-Graphics and the Moving Body', MAN 29(4), 1994; 'Movement Writing Systems' in The Worlds Writing Systems, W. Bright and P. Daniels (Eds.) (Oxford University Press, 1996), and 'Metaphors We Move By', Visual Anthropology Vol 8, 1996.

Drid Williams presently lives and works as a free-lance writer and lecturer in Minneapolis, Minnesota. She completed Diploma, B.Litt. and D.Phil. degrees in social anthropology from St. Hughes College, Oxford, U.K. in 1976, and an MLS in Library Science from the School of Library and Information Science, Indiana University, Bloomington, in 1985. She presently teaches undergraduate courses for the Dance Program in the Theatre Arts Department, University of Minnesota. She is also editing two series of books for Scarecrow Press, The Signs of Human Action. and Readings in Anthropology of the Dance and Human Movement Studies. A current paper soon to be published is Ceci n'est pas un Wallaby. This essay examines the relationship between written texts and movement for a special issue of Visual Anthropology (Vol. 8), for which she is Guest Editor.